Class Teams To Compete In Mock Bowl Wednesday

Jim Berger, Chairman of the College Bowl Committee of the Student Council, has announced that a demonstration Intramural College Bowl will be held next Wednesday, December 5, at 11 a.m. in Ruzicka Hall. This contest will pit a team of four juniors against a team of four sophomores; Dr. Hans Mair of the Political Science Department will be quizmaster. The purpose of this demonstration will be to stimulate interest among the student body in forming additional College Bowl teams so that intramural competition can be continued regularly.

This demonstration is an outgrowth of an informal College Bowl competition which was conducted by a number of students under the leadership of Dr. Mair during the second semester of last year and during the summer months.

Regular Basis

The Student Council appointed a College Bowl Committee under the chairmanship of Jim Berger to plan for intramural College Bowl competition on a regular basis.

The College Bowl next Wednesday will be conducted under the same rules as those used on the television program. All students are urged to attend this demonstration and to consider the possibility of forming teams in their own classes.

Belgian Speaker To Lecture On Economic Relations

On December 3 at 8 p.m. in Ruzicka Hall, the International Relations Club will sponsor a lecture on "The United States and the European Economic Community" by Mr. Paul Luyten.

From Belgium

The speaker, a Belgian, is presently employed by the European Economic Community Commission and thus, his talk will be based on direct observation and personal experience.

Mr. Luyten is a former Economic Affairs Officer in the General Agreement Trade and Tariffs Secretariat.

A. S. O. Will Sponsor Second Mixer Tonight

Tonight, from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m. in the Andrew White Center Cafeteria and Lounge, the Association of Student Orientation will present its second Loyola mixer of the season. The music for the occasion will be provided by "The Sterlings," the group which played for the last mixer. Several local girls' colleges and nursing schools will be invited.

European Trip Available For Loyola Students

Assistant Professor Vincent J. Colimore, Chairman of the Modern Language Department at Loyola College, has announced that the Associated Independent Colleges of Maryland is sponsoring a group flight to Europe for the summer of 1963. The group will leave Idlewild Airport, New York, July 26, 1963, and return August 23, 1963. The round-trip fare by TWA jet is $326 from New York.

Anyone wishing to join tours may do so before leaving New York or when they arrive in Paris, and if enough passengers from the colleges are interested in the group flight, a bus will be chartered which will leave from Loyola College direct to TWA's Terminal at Idlewild Airport.

For reservations, contact Professor Vincent J. Colimore.

Girls, Girls, Girls

Chuck Lancelotta, vice-president of the A.S.O., and Henry Becker, the College Social Chairman, have invited St. Joseph's School of Nursing, Mercy School of Nursing, St. Agnes School of Nursing, and Bon Secours Nursing Home to the mixer. Also invited are Notre Dame College, Mt. St. Agnes College, and St. Joseph's College.

I. D. Cards

This is the second mixer of the season and should prove more enjoyable and more successful than the first mixer. The chairmen have also provided for a check system so that only Loyola College students will be admitted, and all the College students are urged to bring their green Loyola College registration card for identification.

Slight Charge

To cover the cost of the band, there will be a slight charge not to exceed $.50. All Loyola students are asked to attend.

The members of Alpha Sigma Nu ate heartily at their annual initiation-dinner in the Faculty Lounge last week.

George C. Thompson, assistant professor of chemistry at Loyola College, died Monday, November 19, in Western Maryland State Hospital, in Hagerstown, after a long illness. He had been a member of the faculty since 1947.

Born in Abington, Massachusetts, in 1896, Mr. Thompson received a bachelor of arts degree at Catholic University in 1933. Before coming to Loyola College he had taught chemistry at St. Joseph's College in Emmitsburg for twenty-four years. He had also taught mathematics at Sacred Heart Monastery in Pikesville since 1960.

Rev. Vincent F. Beatty, S.J., President of Loyola College, offered a Requiem Mass at St. Joseph's Church, last Thursday at 10 a.m.

On behalf of the faculty and student body, we mourn the loss of a most distinguished and dedicated member of the faculty.

Editorial

No Loyola-ity

The Greyhound has had much to say in the past about the participation of Loyola students in the school's extra-curricular activities. We have had so much to say, in fact, that many people have accused us of trying to interest students in supporting our activity, specially. This is not entirely true, although we must admit that we are interested in obtaining the help of as many students as we possibly can on our publication. Our exhortations have, however, been aimed at providing all activities with an ample supply of active members who would work diligently in order to facilitate the movement of their group towards a common goal.

Our efforts in recruiting the aid of many Loyolans have frequently had extremely edifying results, and more than one activity head has extended his thanks to us for our work along these lines. However, the results of our labors were not always very encouraging. Some activities or events which we have publicized were not supported in the manner we would have liked. An example was Loyola Night.

Before anyone takes offense at our last statement, we would like to tender the opinion that Loyola Night was a very successful and efficiently run affair. The acts presented were of very high caliber and the performances were extremely well done. Our quarrel is not with the evening's presentation. Our objection is to the fact that a very small number of students were responsible for the success of the evening and that the bulk of the performers were seniors.

Why didn't more underclassmen turn out acts for the evening? Well, it is traditional that more seniors contribute to Loyola Night than underclassmen, and it is also traditional that a senior student is master of ceremonies for the evening and that he appear in a number of the sketches. It is not traditional that the senior class dominate the night's presentations as it did on the last Loyola Night. Nor is it traditional for so few of them to have been responsible for the evening's success.

Could a reason for the underclassmen's seeming laxity in the matter be that they were disinterested in the activity? Could it be that scholastic difficulties kept the under-classmen at home? Or, could it be that the freshmen and sophomores were not properly informed as to the purposes and requirements for Loyola Night? The answers to these questions should certainly prove to be interesting to the sponsors of the night, our Masque & Rapier Society. We suggest, therefore, that someone seek these answers and do so quickly, so that next year's Loyola Night can be even more successful than that which was presented last week.

P.A.G.

Editor's Note: The Greyhound joins with the Music Club in expressing its gratitude for the cooperation and much needed aid given in presenting John Gardecki in his very successful recital. We would like to give particular attention to the Student Council for its provision of programs and to the Green and Grey for its advertisements. Thanks go to other organizations on campus who pitched in some small part to make the whole its colossal success.

THE REVIEWING STAND

Yojimbo is an Eastern western presented in a satirical manner. The movie-time is 1860 and the sun is setting low in Japan: the Tokugawa Dynasty has fallen and law and order no longer reign. Into a dusty village one Autumn day strolls a wandering samurai with his sword for hire. Now the unhappy hamlet is divided into two factions, backed respectively by the silk and sake interests; each have their own rowdy retainers and each want control of the gambling concession at the local silk fair. When the samurai displays his skills by leisurely lobbing off a few limbs, each side eagerly desires his services as a yojimbo ("body-guard" in Japanese). The samurai vacillates between the two and finally decides that both are equally evil and deserves nothing less drastic than death. After much hulabaloo and sword-swinging this is exactly what happens.

Dull & Violent

As directed by Akira Kurosawa (of Roshomon fame), this Japanese import now at the 5 West is alternately dull and violent. What brings on the boredom is hard to say. I would blame the first of the film's two showdown scenes (the other is the finale). Kurosawa has placed such a strong critical scene so early in the film that much of the succeeding action seems anticlimatic.

Taken alone this scene is the most highly connotative one in the film. Many reviewers and viewers see it --and the film--as more than a satire on the Hollywood western, rather as a parody on the East-West struggle. Maybe so. Other scenes do aid this interpretation, e.g., the final smoke and slaughter scenes have that Hiroshima horror. But all in all this interpretation does not integrate well into the film as a whole.

Flat or Round

Lest all this seem too harsh, I must admit that I enjoyed the film. I thought Toshiro Mifune as the samurai made a flat character substantially round, cleverly carrying over everything from the swordsman stately gait to his idiosyncrasy of scratching the nape of his neck. Also, Masuro Sato's oriental jazz added an exotic zest to the proceedings.

In short, Yojimbo although crudely powerful as satire, leaves too much of the deja-vu feeling of so many a western.

The Skeptic Tank

Well, final exam time is not as far off as we would have it. Ever study an author and then have to take a test on him? You probably hated him for sitting back and turning out all these books while you have to take tests on them. Take heart! Even the greatest people have taken final exams. For instance Shakespeare must have taken many a final in order to write words like these:

Ever been undecided on a true false question?

This hair I tear is mine.

King John, III, IV, 145

To be or not to be, that is the question

on seeing the test--

Oh, I am ignorame itself on this.

Henry IV, III, II, 213

So fool and fair a day I have not seen

Macbeth I, III, 38

Who could do well in this exam? Never was such a scholar made

Henry V, I, I, L 3

In proving an answer, ask yourself-- May I with right conscience make claim

Henry V, I, II, L96

Why did your friend fail?

You would say it hath been all in all his study. . .

. . . his hours filled up with riots, banquets, sports,

And never noted in him any study

Henry V, I, I, 42, 56-7

When all is said and done--

Let us seek out some desolate shod and there

weep our sad hearts empty.

Macbeth IV, III, LL 1-2

And---

You to a long and well deserved bed.

As You Like It

V, IV, II96

At last, you blame it on others--

Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Hound Basketball Opener Set For Tuesday Night

This coming Tuesday night marks the long awaited opening of the Loyola cage season. The Hound Hoopsters will play host to visiting Western Maryland College. Game time is 8:45 pm. Loyola fans will be eager to see if their team can better its 10-9 record of last season. Judging from workouts and scrimmages thus far, the squad

Debts Capture Intramural Title

The Intramural Football League closed out its season in an exciting fashion as the Debts won the championship, whipping the upstart 1.5's, 13-6. The 1.5's had upset the previously unbeaten Debts 12-6, thus causing this play-off game. The 1.5 scoring came on touchdown passes from Donellan to both Carlin and Blair, Jack Conley's interception and runback provided the only Debit points.

The championship game itself was another well-played, hard fought contest. The Debts took a 7-6 lead after the first half on a pass from Zdenek to Jack Conley. An intercepted pass and run by Duck Blair accounted for the only 1.5 score. The other Debit score also came via a Zdenek pass, this time to Jim Nosker.

Basketball

Applications have also been accepted this week for Intramural Basketball, and the season will begin after Christmas. The Polar Bears, last year's champs, are again favored to win this year, but strong competition will be provided by the Mavericks and the Porky Pigs.

Bowling

Here are the latest standings from the Intramural Bowling League:

	W.	L.
Fouline-5	13	2
Bombers	12	3
Sharks	9	6
Wild Ones	8	7
Holy Rollers	8	7
Zorches	7	8
O'Henries	7	8
Sam & Friends	7	8
Intellectuals	7	8
No Counts	6	9
Schizos	6	9

looks to be improved. Only one member of last year's starting lineup, senior captain Tony Torba, will be missing when Loyola takes the floor against the Green Terrors. Although Tony's rebounding skill will be missed, Coach Nap Doherty feels that Pat Flynn, Don Wallenhorst, Phil Potter, and Tom Keyes will provide rebounding strength equal to, if not better than, last season's.

As far as scoring power is concerned, Loyola should be improved. All of the top scorers from last year's outfit have returned and all of them look to be improved. Pat Flynn and Mike McCarthy should provide good scoring from the center spot. In the forecourt, Don Wallenhorst, Phil Potter, Tom Keyes, Bill Carew and Steve Bogusky all have very good jump shots. Coach Doherty also has a wealth of talent to choose from at the guard spots in Charley O'Donnell, Marty Maher, Billy Morris, Bob Schu, and Alex Cummings.

All in all, the Hound squad appears to be deep and balanced. It will have good overall speed and shooting ability. A lack of height and consequently, rebounding ability, will be the main impediments to a big season.

However, in past seasons this has not hindered the successes of the Hound cagers. This season should be no exception.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

by Tom Kenney

Next Tuesday, the Hound swimming and basketball teams will open their seasons. These two sports promise as much excitement for the spectators as was provided by the fine season of the Hound soccer squad. From the spectator point of view, basketball and swimming have always been two of Loyola's finest sports. The cagers are always exciting. To cite an example, take Loyola's thrilling four-overtime victory over C.U. last year. Our swimmers have also provided their share of excitement.

This season both the cagers and the natators should have fine records. Neither squad suffered extensive losses to graduation. They have experience in depth.

These two teams deserve a great deal of support from the student body. They have gotten it in the past from our current upperclassmen. They will need it from our present freshmen in the future. This is a fine opportunity for the class of '66 to display its spirit.

THE CHAMPIONS: This is the Loyola swim squad that brought home the Mason-Dixon Championship last year.

Swimmers Meet Shepherd In Opener On Tuesday

Next Tuesday afternoon at home, the Mason-Dixon Champions open official league competition against Shepherd College. This meet is the beginning of a long series of meets which promise to provide a tough action-packed year for Loyola's natators. In a schedule such as this one promises to be, perhaps the greatest asset which a team can possess is experience, and this is one asset which Loyola figures to have.

Vets Carry Load

According to Coach Klarner, it will be up to the veterans to assume the bulk of the responsibility during the first part of the season. These old-timers carry a heavy load since the hounds must get off to a fast start facing four tough meets in eight days.

Frosh Week

Freshman strength, which Coach Klarner had expected to see this year in abundance, is at a minimum. Those freshmen who have remained with the squad thus far have not developed as well as had been expected. The lone exception to the lack of progress is Paul Palmeri, rookie diver, who is doing extremely well.

N.Y. Trip

The New York trip follows the Shepherd meet with three tank tilts with Seton, Holy Cross, and St. Peter's. The Hounds then return to home water to face a speedy crew from Washington and Lee. After this meet, the Christmas layoff will give the water Hounds an opportunity to gather strength for the contests to come during the second semester.

The Riflemen

Loyola's rifle team posted its third win without a loss last week as it downed Georgetown University by a 1368-1344 score. Tom Nooney was the Hounds' high scorer, posting a 278 total. The team has two matches scheduled next week: Dickinson College on Wednesday and Johns Hopkins University on Friday.

Back To School

The squad's new coach, Sergeant Ken Funk, reports that he has just returned from a special school for rifle coaches. The school was conducted at Ft. Meade by some of the top rifle marksmen in the United States.

Coach Carey

Mat Views

Although there was some fear that we might lose him, Charley Carey is back at Loyola this season as wrestling coach. Last year in his first season as mentor, Charley led his charges to first place in the northern division of the Conference and a second place finish in the tournament.

On paper, the outlook for the season is good. There were only two losses to graduation. However, the squad is plagued by a weight problem among the returnees. All of the veterans, except Alex Schlipp, reported at the first practice overweight.

Vets

Heading the vet returnees is the Hounds senior captain, Buck McCarthy. Buck will wrestle in the 138 pound class in which he posted a 4-2 record last season. Bish Baker (4-1) will handle the 123 pound chores. At 142 pounds will be Alex Schlipp (6-0). Butch Emmett (5-1) and Mel Kodenski (1-1) will wrestle at 150 and 160 pounds respectively. In the 167 and 177 pound classes, Tom Milligan (6-0) and Bill Le Fevre, who missed last season because of an injury, will draw the tougher assignment because of his experience. Soph Len Eiswert (1-2) will wrestle in the 191 pound class and Denny Hupp will go in the heavyweight class.

RUN AROUND: An unidentified intramural player prepares to break through the line in a recent intramural game.
